The Duolingo English Test has seven types of questions drawn from language testing research that measure different aspects of language proficiency⁵. Each of the question types contribute to two subscores.

- Literacy: C-test, writing, yes/no (text)
- Conversation: Speaking, dictation, elicited speech, yes/no (audio)
- Comprehension: C-test, dictation, elicited speech, yes/no (text), yes/no (audio)
- Production: Speaking and Writing

Production: Scoring criteria

6.4 Extended Speaking and Writing Tasks

The writing and speaking tasks are scored by automated scoring algorithms developed by ML and NLP experts at Duolingo. There are two separate algorithms: one for the speaking tasks and one for the writing tasks. Currently, the scores for the tasks are estimated at the portfolio level—meaning that the speaking score that is included in the total score represents test taker performance on the four speaking tasks and the writing score represents test taker performance on the four writing tasks.

The speaking and writing scoring systems evaluate each task based on the features listed below.

- Grammatical accuracy
- Grammatical complexity
- Lexical sophistication
- Lexical diversity
- Task relevance
- Length
- Fluency & acoustic features (speaking)
